JAP CROWN PRINCE TO VISIT U. S.

Will Call on Carol in Roumania, After Sight Seeing Tour Through Big American Cities in 1921—Wants No Official Ceremonies.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Tokio, Nov. 16.—Crown Prince Hirohito of Japan will leave this country early in 1921 for a ten months visit to the United States, Europe and India shattering all precedents in Japanese court life.

It is definitely announced also that the marriage of the future ruler of Japan will take place in the autumn of 1921, probably immediately on his return from America.

This is the first time that a future emperor of Japan has visited Europe or America, and it is taken by business and commercial circles to mean a definite departure from one of the old traditions of court life. The prince was active in the entertainment of Carol, crown price of Roumania, when the latter visited here last summer. One of the reasons the crown prince is going to Europe is to repay the visit of the Roumanian crown prince. The itinerary and other details of the tour have already been arranged by the imperial family and the state advisors.

It is expected that the crown prince will visit San Francisco, Denver, Pittsburgh, Washington, Chicago, New York and possibly Boston while in the United States.

Crown Prince Hirohito is 19 years old. He has just been appointed a major in the army and a lieutenant commander in the navy. Unlike the recent trip of the recent trip of the Prince of Wales, heir to the British throne, the tour of the Japanese crown prince will not be of an official nature. The young prince is going sight seeing and does not want to be bothered by official ceremonies.

VOTE TABULATED MINUS SOLDIERS

Canvassers Recess Until Five Soldier Ballots Can Be Reported By Boards In Home Districts.

The Ulster county board of canvassers met at the supervisors' rooms Monday evening after the close of the session of the supervisors, Chairman Charles A. Schermerhorn presiding. It was reported that the work of canvassing the votes cast in the county on Tuesday, November 2, had been completed and tabulated but that the soldier vote was not included. Clerk Shufeldt of the board of elections reported that the board had received five soldier votes that had to be canvassed by the boards of the election districts in which the soldiers claimed their residence, and later the result must be canvassed by the board of county canvassers. The election law fixes the date as not later than the seventh Tuesday after election when this must be done. Supervisor Fratsher of the board of canvassers then moved and it was carried that the board take a recess until it is determined when the soldier vote can be legally canvassed by the board. A recess was then taken.

The following is the result of the canvass as made by the committee on tabulation:

BREAK IN THREE MORE GROCERIES

Gang of Thieves Continues Work of Burglarizing Small Grocery Stores in City, and Get but Little Plunder.

The epidemic of burglaries about town continues unabated and some time during the night the gang broke into three stores, but got but little plunder. At the grocery store of Charles Spalt, at No. 526 Delaware avenue, entrance was secured through a back window and about one dollar in pennies was stolen.

The store of Morris Barnowitz on Chambers street, near Murray street, was also entered, and candy stolen. The thieves entered through a rear window.

At the store of Morris Bahl, No. 35 Murray street, the gang broke a padlock off the back door and broke into the money drawer, which was empty. As far as could be ascertained they took nothing from the store.

All of the jobs pulled off recently have the earmarks of the work of the same gang of young boys.

HARDING GETS BACK TO WORK

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Brownsville, Tex., Nov. 16.—President-elect Warren G. Harding, today on the last lap of his vacation in Texas, is for the first time since leaving his home in Marion, turning his thoughts to things other than rest and recreation.

Senator Harding has two conferences planned for today, one with Senator Albert Fall of New Mexico, and one with Governor Hobby of Texas. Both of these men are deeply interested in the Mexican situation and it is understood they will give the senator the benefit of their knowledge, although the president-elect stated very definitely that he will not commit himself on the Mexican situation until after he has taken office.

Senator Fall today insisted that his visit to Brownsville was merely for the purpose of paying his personal respects to the president-elect, but he commented on pictures of Francisco Villa at a plow by stating his belief that Villa would not long remain at the plow.

Governor Hobby came to Brownsville today in a special train and sought to give an official greeting to the president-elect.

It was expected he would discuss briefly two matters which are of vital interest to this state, namely, Mexican and credit for agricultural purposes.

The troops at Fort Brown will be drawn up today for formal review by Governor Hobby and President-elect Harding may participate in the review, although he has previously reviewed these troops.

If the conferences today permit, the senator will play golf late in the afternoon.

British Pressure on Sinn Fein.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, Nov. 16.—The British government is taking drastic steps to reimpose the crown's authority in large districts of Ireland, which, for many months, have been under control of the Sinn Fein courts, the Evening News announced today. The auxiliary police (black and tans) and the British military forces in Ireland are being strengthened and preparations are under way to re-occupy abandoned barracks.

Changes on Transport.

Lyman Hyde is now acting captain on the ferry Transport running between Kingston and Rhinecliff. Captain James Dee and Captain John Malone of the Cornell Line, are also acting pilots on the ferry.

GREEK CABINET HAS RESIGNED

Following Defeat of Venizelos At Polls—Rhallis, Monarchist, Called To Form New Government—Bourse Closes—Constantine To Go Back.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, Nov. 16.—The Greek cabinet, headed by Premier Venizelos, has resigned as a result of the defeat of the Venizelistas in the general election, said a news agency dispatch from Athens this afternoon.

Former Premier Rhallis, who was in power under the old regime, has been called to form a new cabinet.

The Athens Bourse was closed today in fear of a financial crash.

Admiral Coundouriotis, the new Greek regent, was requested to take over full powers of government by the Venizelos cabinet before it resigned, the news agency dispatch added.

Admiral Coundouriotis was elected regent by the Greek chamber of deputies following the death of King Alexander. Prince Paul was summoned to the throne in the line of succession, but he was absent from the country and Admiral Coundouriotis was chosen to serve as the head of the state until Paul arrived in Athens.

Lucerne, Nov. 16.—"The apparent defeat of the Venizelistas (adherents of Premier Venizelos) in the Greek election means my early return to the throne at Athens," declared former King Constantine today. "I was not surprised at the result."

There is much rejoicing among Constantine's entourage.

GOOD BEER KILL CANNOT BE DAMMED

One Flow That is Uninterrupted by the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Law—Appellate Division Reverses Trial Court.

One of the decisions handed down by the appellate division last week is a reversal of the judgment of Dwight Divine, defendant, against August Geiger, plaintiff, an appeal from the decision made by Justice Rudd dismissing Mr. Geiger's complaint. The opinion, which is concurred in by all the justices, is by Justice Cochrane, and is quite lengthy. He states:

"The plaintiff alleges in his complaint that he is the owner of a farm in the town of Wawarsing, Ulster county, N. Y., through which farm flows a stream of water known as the Good Beer Kill, and that about the year 1910 the defendant erected and has since maintained a dam across said stream at a place lower than the plaintiff's farm, causing the water of the stream to overflow about forty acres thereof. The plaintiff demands judgment in said complaint that the defendant be restrained from causing the water to be impounded so as to overflow said premises and for damages for injuries previously sustained. The defendant in his answer denies the material allegations of the complaint and alleges a right by adverse possession to maintain the dam in question as it has been used and maintained by him."

The justice then discusses the facts and the evidence and findings of the trial justice, and the opinion concludes:

"For the reason therefore that the evidence establishes no grant to the defendant of the easement in question and that the question of his prescriptive right thereto has not been decided, or if it has been decided that such decision was not reached by the application of correct legal principles, the judgment herein cannot be sustained.

"The judgment should be reversed and a new trial granted with costs to the appellant to abide the event."

When the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company was in operation the dam site of the Good Beer Kill was bought by the company as a feeder for the canal. The company used it as such until about the year 1885 when it discontinued such use, and in 1889, at the time of the Johnstown Flood, the company tore the dam open and it remained that way up to the time the canal was sold. After the sale of the canal the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company conveyed to William Rose and William Rose conveyed to Dwight Divine whatever right they had in the dam site and the impounding of water, if any, which remained with the company. After that, in about the year, 1906, Dwight Divine, who has a cutlery plant at Ellenville, began the erection of a new dam, which was not finally completed until about 1914. This was a modern constructed dam, made of concrete and with flashboards, and it is the claim of Mr. Geiger and the other land owners up the stream that it backed water further than any prior dam, flooding their lands and destroying trees, crops, etc. The actions have been brought to restrain Divine from maintaining the dam and for damages.

The Geiger case was brought to trail before Justice Rudd and a jury, and after the testimony was in, the jury was dismissed and the case decided by the justice without the jury. He rendered a judgment dismissing the complaint and decided that Divine had the right under grants to dam this stream and flood plaintiff's lands.

Judge Clearwater is attorney for the defendant-respondent and Alton Van Etten attorney for the plaintiff-appellant.

RODIE AND CAR WERE IN CANADA

Cedar Street Man Arrested There on Charge of Selling Oldsmobile Stolen From Van's Garage in This City to a Canadian Garage—Warrant Here For His Arrest Also.

James Rodie of No. 60 Cedar street, who has been a resident of this city for the past two or three years, is under arrest at St. Cesaire, Canada, on a charge of selling to the Central Garage of that place an Oldsmobile that it is alleged Rodie stole from Van's Garage at No. 529 Broadway. There is also a warrant held by the local police for Rodie's arrest on a charge of grand larceny in the first degree which was issued on information furnished Judge Schirick Monday by J. David Schenck president and treasurer of Van's Garage.

According to the information sworn to by Mr. Schenck Monday on November 8, James Rodie called at the garage and said he desired to purchase an Oldsmobile, 1916 model, and that he desired to drive to Ellenville with the car and would return in two days and pay the garage the sum of $800. This amount he said he expected to borrow from his father-in-law, residing in Ellenville, and if unable to borrow the money he would return the car on or before November 10.

He took the car under those conditions, and that was the last heard of him until Mr. Schenck received a telephone call from Canada inquiring about the car. From the conversation over the telephone it was learned that Rodie had sold the car to the Central Garage in St. Cesaire for $200. The following day he had called at the garage and said he desired to refund the $200 and take back the car, as he had a customer who would pay him a good deal more for the car.

His statements made the garage owners suspicious and they promptly got in touch with the garage here, and were informed that the car had been stolen.

A representative of the local garage left for Canada today. It is not known yet whether steps will be taken to extradite Rodie to this country, or try him in a Canadian court.

Rodie's wife is with him in Canada. While here he was employed by a local meat house.

THIRTEEN HELD UNDER DRY LAW

In Supreme Court in Catskill Monday —Four Indicted Pay Fines—Nine Others Bailed at $1,000 Each.

Thirteen indictments for violation of the federal prohibition law were handed down in supreme court in Catskill Monday. Four of the thirteen men indicted pleaded guilty and were fined, while the nine others were held in $1,000 bail each for appearance before Judge G. D. B Hasbrouck at Kingston next month. Two wholesalers and eleven retailers are involved.

The indictments came as the culmination to a series of raids started Friday night and a quiet investigation which has been going on for a considerable time. The first raid was Friday night when District Attorney Harry Curtis, Deputy Sheriff George Lockwood of Greene county, and two internal revenue agents from Albany visited the establishment of Amos and Harry Gordon, father and son, at Hunter. The two pleaded guilty to selling liquor and were fined $200 each. Jail sentence was suspended.

The saloon conducted by Nicholas Kuerstiner at Coxsackie was raided Friday also, and when arrested, Kuerstiner is alleged to have told the authorities he bought his liquor of Barney and Harry Coglianese, wholesalers at Catskill. John Clore, bartender for Kuerstiner, was arrested and then the raiding party came back to Catskill where the Coglianese arrests were made. Clore and Kuerstiner were fined $200 each and placed on probation.

In the Coglianese store the district attorney's party is alleged to have found a part of a barrel of alcohol, stamped with the name of an Albany drug firm and labelled "for non-beverage purposes." It is alleged Harry and Barney Coglianese, colored, processed and bottled the alcohol they bought from the Albany firm and sold it as whiskey.

The others arrested include Charles Runis, bartender; Edward H. Smith, hotel keeper; James Schermerhorn, bartender; Frank Hasselman, Jr., saloon keeper; Patrick Mulligan, bartender, and Tony Merrick, bartender, all of Catskill, and Clarence H. Hicks, saloon keeper of Prattsville.

To Re-establish Cutlery Plant.

CANADIAN DELEGATE CAUSES TUMULT AT LEAGUE OF NATIONS MEETING

Accuses President of Submitting Motions Before They Are Read—Vital Court of International Relations Appears Far Away—Sessions to be Secret—Jap Equality Resolution Not in Sight.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Geneva, Nov. 16.—Tumult broke out today in the meeting of the league of nations assembly when President Paul Hymans was accused of not reading motions before putting them to the delegates. The accusation was made by Sir George E. Foster of Canada during debate upon the rules. President Hymans resented the imputation but the Canadian delegate kept shouting his protests despite the sharp pounding of the president's gavel.

Japan suffered her first defeat when the Japanese delegation attempted to obtain a rule that half of the chairmen of committees be chosen from outside of Europe. The proposal was rejected.

Over the objections of Lord Robert Cecil representing South Africa, the assembly voted in favor of secret committee meetings. England, France and Italy supported secret sessions.

The decision to hold committee meetings in secret shows that practically all of the league's work will be done behind closed doors. The assembly voted in favor of the issuance of brief communiques to the press.

Geneva, Nov. 16.—The divergence of views of the delegations attending the league of nations assembly meeting regarding the organization of an international court of justice and arbitration made it appear extremely unlikely today that the tribunal would be functioning among the great powers for two or three years.

This court was the one keystone upon which the proponents of the league of nations had counted for the perpetuation of world peace. Officials of the league and the secretariat admitted with reluctance that it seemed unlikely that any agreement would be reached during the present meeting. It is understood that their conclusions were founded, to some extent, upon the absence of the United States.

A majority of the delegates probably will vote through a plan for the organization of an international court after several days' debate for the rejection of immaterial amendments, but the plan must receive the approval of the various governments before it can be put into effect.

Some of the delegations came to Geneva with amendments which their governments claim are necessary to the successful functioning of the court. It is considered certain these governments will hold aloof if their amendments are rejected in the hope of gaining support for their contentions at future meetings. Thus, the whole scheme for the creation of the court would be delayed indefinitely.

If bickerings arise over trivial points and it seems likely they will, the present meeting may drag along until Christmas.

Delay is being created by lengthy speeches and motions. The English have already engaged in disputes with the official interpreters, claiming their remarks were misinterpreted.

It begins to appear that the Japanese delegation will not press its resolution for racial equality, as the result of counsels of powerful friends. When Baron Hyashi, head of the Japanese delegation, was asked if he would bring the question before the assembly he assumed an expression of surprise and said:

"I do not know anything about the racial equality resolution that I am reported to have brought to Geneva."

"I do not think we will press the question at this time," said another member of the Japanese delegation. "The league is weak enough as it is and we don't want to do anything which would injure it further."

Alfredo Costa, head of the Portuguese delegation, intimated a move would be made to amend the league covenant to meet objections in the United States.

"Unofficial conversations are proceeding which may result in the eventual amendment of the covenant to meet the American views," said Senor Costa. "I do not see how the league can succeed unless the United States is a member of it. I believe that we can change the pact to meet American views without endangering it."

Paul Hymans, Belgian foreign minister, who was elected president of the assembly, is receiving telegrams of congratulations from all parts of the world.

Today's session opened at 10:30 o'clock when certain proposals that had been made by Scandinavian countries were taken under debate.

O'CONNELL HAS FRACTURED SKULL

Barge Captain Found Unconscious In Saugerites After Trip With Friend To Glasco—Had Been Drinking.

James F. O'Connell, captain of the barge "Marion Murray" was found unconscious, his head in a pool of blood, near the foot of East Bridge street, Saugerties, about ten o'clock Monday night, and was brought to the Benedictine Sanitarium, where on examination by Dr. B. W. Gifford of Saugerties and Mark O'Meara of this city he was found to be suffering from a compound fracture of the skull at the base of the brain.

Captain O'Connell arrived at Saugerties Sunday and tied up his boat near the place where his body was found. The barge "Colonel Smith" also arrived at Saugerties Sunday, and tied up near the same place. Her captain is Charles Kenessry.

The captains of both barges started out Monday afternoon for recreation and Captain Kenessry hired a livery rig, in which both men drove to Glasco. They returned to Saugerties during the evening, and both evidently were intoxicated. Captain Kenessry says he let Captain O'Connell out of the rig near the boat and is quite sure that he did not fall out. Then he returned the rig to the livery and went back to his boat. He says he did not know of the accident to the other captain until told of it this morning.

Captain O'Connelly evidently had been lying at the place where he was found for some time as the blood had become hard. The blood had flowed from one ear. After examination the doctors concluded that he had not been struck by any blunt instrument but are of the opinion that the fracture of the skull was caused by a fall. A rumor that he had been held up and robbed apparently is dispelled by the discovery of $32 in his pockets.

Chief of Police Arthur Richter of Saugerties began investigation as soon as the body was found and continued it today.

"TRIP TO CUBA" MAKES BIG HIT

Nine Hundred See First Performance at St. Peter's Hall Monday Night—Will Be Given Again This Evening.

In spite of muddy walking nearly 900 people made their way to St. Peter's Hall to witness the first night of "A Trip to Cuba." Their persistency was rewarded by a an exceptionally high class entertainment. From a musical standpoint the program included the best, up-to-the-minute ballads and end songs and all were well rendered. Deserving of special mention are Bob Buchanan, whose clever exhibition of soft shoe dancing coupled with ready wit and local humor delighted the audience and Bill Houghtaling who put his end song, "Down Barcelona Way," over in great style.

Skipper Ed Scherer always on deck, though never at sea, was "out of sight," while a small though promising edition of the same brood in the person of his son, Wendell, was inclined to usurp his authority. Frank Leirrey, "Alfalf," for short, displayed his original genius for comical versification. Bob Brazee and John Spader, as black as night, made things so. Their principal victime was "poor little Heinie." Miss Anna Forsch in a cross-fire with Ed Scherer had the the captain at her mercy till he called "quits."

Ballads by Henry Fisher, Clarence Schryver and Joseph Kubecek received the applause they deserved.

The sign of public approval was lavishly bestowed upon Marie Sass, in "Gypsy"; Agnes Bruck, "Alice's Blue Gown," and upon Agnes and Cecelia Kraus in the hit from "Little Miss Charity."

The big novelty number, "Bells," by "Eight Belles," never more justly so named caused the house. The feature was led by Carrie Brock assisted by Agnes Bruck, Agnes and Cecelia Kraus, Emma Spader, Kathryn Nicholson, Anastasia Weber and Hilda Woerner. The Glee Club quartet, Messrs. Zellner, Raible, Kraus and Fleck, rendered, "Georgia Moon" and "Let the Rest of the World Roll By," most creditably. "The Love Nest," in a duet by Glen Kraus and Pauline Bruder, proved a charming number splendidly executed.

The same performance will be repeated this evening.

West Park Red Cross.

Miss Dorcas A. Dewey has been appointed to solicit the entire village and community of West Park for the fourth Red Cross roll call, beginning Monday and ending on November 25. Miss Dewey will visit every home in West Park during the time named.

SCHOOL LIBRARIES LACKING FUNDS

Although New York state was the first government in the world to establish a system of free public libraries, its school library system, founded in 1835, now is endangered by lack of adequate financial support. These facts are set forth in a review of the origin, growth and function of school libraries, issued by the state department of education, through Dr. Sherman Williams, chief of the school libraries division.

Dr. Williams' pamphlet concludes with recommendations, chief among which are these:

That the state provide at least $250,000 annually for school libraries; that every new school building contain suitable library quarters; that an inspector of grade room librarians be employed by the state; that the state contribute liberally toward the salaries of librarians employed solely by school systems; that state aid be withheld unless libraries keep accurate accounts of books added to the collection and loans made from it; that normal schools, training schools and classes be required to give pupils instruction in proper selection and care of books for use in grade room libraries, at least.

The recommendations also fix in detail qualifications for librarians in the various schools, making the maintenance of certain standards of proficiency necessary to enable schools to claim state aid.

Dr. Williams takes up in detail the development of the library idea among the colonists, points to suggestions for state action as early as 1812, and final passing of a law, levying a school tax for library purposes in 1835. Inevitably the collection of books in each district became really a small circulating library for adults, and through lack of attention became broken up and was lost, or changed in character, in the course of years until it became worthless as a school adjunct and frequently objectionable, at least to the more particular minds, as general reading matter. The decline of the combined school and district library reached a low point about the time of the Civil War and until 1881. Despite annual appropriations its condition was deplorable.

In 1892 the legislature empowered the state superintendent of public instruction to take measures looking to reorganization of the school library system and from that time by successive steps, a system of school libraries adapted to the needs of each particular case, has been built up. Demonstrated to the satisfaction of many educators that a public library and school library combination was impracticable, the aim in recent years has been to make the school library an institution that early enlists the interest of the children in good books, develops such interest, in connection with school work, as it progresses and finally inculcates a love of books that proves a comfort and satisfaction in after years, when the public library and the home fills the place taken earlier by the collection of books in the school.

HURLEY.

Hurley, Nov. 15.—A turkey dinner in Hurley! A Hurley turkey dinner. When you have said that, enough said." The only thing that remains is to mention the date, Tuesday evening, November 22. Shorty drops in on New York!

HERE WE ARE, PETE!

New York
Wednesday night.

Camped once more in the plumb centre of our old stamping grounds—rubbing elbows with the roaring racket and running flush into more electric displays, blazing posters and smashing signs that sound the joys of Camel Cigarettes than you'd ever believe could be jammed into one town!

When I hit Broadway this p.m. I'd said the Reynolds folks had transplanted "Camel City" right up here!

It seems, like all New Yorkers have adopted Camels as their own personal brand! And, Pete, since this is the original Speed town, it's only what you expect when you see 'em carry a package of Camels in each coat pocket! If their right hand is busy they dig out their left hand deck—they just won't lose time getting a Camel lighted! That's the gait around here, old thoroughbred!

And, Peter, the New Yorker has his own A-1 pet reason why he's so keen for Camels! For instance, Doc Marshall will bet his car on Camels quality against any cigarette in the world! Bill James says to me:—"Shorty, there never was mild, mellow body like Camels!" And, as for Dan Boggs—he spills it that Camels are the only cigarette free from any unpleasant cigarette aftertaste or cigaretty odor! And, he knows! Frank Frazer will tell you it's Camels wonderful Turkish and Domestic blend! And, ALL of them are right!!!

And, Pete, old proof-of-the-pudding—you tell 'em that Missouri hasn't anything on little old New York when it comes to that "Show me" stuff—on cigarettes or anything else!

Sincerely
Shorty.

About forty guests from Wittenberg, Shady and this place gathered at the home of Mrs. Foster Shultis on Thursday night to a variety shower given in honor of Miss Hazel Myers of Samsonville. About 10 o'clock Miss Myers was ushered into a room where stood a table laden with gifts, which after they were opened proved to all be very useful. After a dainty lunch was served they all departed to their homes, bestowing best wishes and much happiness to the bride-to-be.

INTEREST IN BOYS' WELFARE WORK

The sessions of the boys' work conference which is to meet Tuesday evening, November 30, and Wednesday evening, December 1, on the invitation of the Chamber of Commerce and Rotary Club, will be held in the high school auditorium.

The joint committee of the Chamber of Commerce and Rotary Club have nearly completed arrangements for the program and have begun sending out invitations to organizations in Kingston interested in boys' work.

A prominent speaker bringing the benefit of wide experience will be secured to address the conference on Tuesday evening, November 30. The rest of Tuesday evening and all of Wednesday evening, December 1, will be devoted to an intensive discussion by local men and women of the special problems affecting the welfare of Kingston boys.

The discussion of each topic will be introduced by a speaker who will have prepared his remarks on the basis of a study of local conditions with respect to his particular topic There will be a leader of discussion for each topic and time will be reserved for discussion from the floor.

It is the belief of the committee that this plan will result in the bringing forward and the careful consideration of a number of suggestions which will be very fruitful for practical application in making this conference a notable forward step in the practically applied interest of Kingston in Kingston boys.

The early response to the plans of the committee indicates a widespread interest in the conference.

HOPE INSTEAD OF DESPAIR

Inscription Suggested for Portal of British Institution Would Seem Peculiarly Happy.

Above the entrance to the prison on Dartmoor, Eng., which is now to be done away with, two Latin words are cut into the stone, which may be rendered "Spare the vanquished," and it was in this spirit the French prisoners in the Napoleonic wars as well as American prisoners in the War of 1812 were received and treated, and in time allowed to live on parole in the neighboring villages and towns.

Stories of these refined and charming hostages have delighted the heart of youthful readers of many generations, and the work done by them in carving and carpentering is still carefully treasured in many a home in Dartmoor to the present day. Little could they have imagined that the fine air would make Dartmoor as famous a resort as some of the highlands of Switzerland, and that after having become a convict prison about 60 years ago, the place of their incarceration would be turned into an institution for training lads on the Borstal system. The boys will have freedom, and will be acquiring a knowledge of farming and reclamation work, as well as other means of gaining a living and fitting them to become valuable members of society. The boys will be merely hostages, and another legend should be carved over the gateway, this time something more suitable to the occasion, such as "Take hope, all you who enter here."—Christian Science Monitor.

"THRIFT" THAT DOESN'T PAY

Some Suggestions for the Housekeeper and for Those Who Are Too Saving.

There are some thrift suggestions that do not always pay, remarks a writer in the New York Sun.

It doesn't pay, for instance, to wrap the ice in your icebox up in newspaper to save the ice when by so doing you will keep the rest of the icebox from being kept cool. You may save your ice, but you may lose more than the worth of the ice in meat and vegetables that have been spoiled.

It doesn't pay to make a cake without butter or eggs when you have to throw half of the cake away because no one will eat it.

It doesn't pay to do your own housecleaning to save the expense of a woman by the day when this means that you are not able to have dinner at home at an expense of rather more than new material would cost.

It doesn't pay to deal with a grocer who undersells the other grocers a little because he has no delivery service when you spend an hour in getting your supplies in order to save 10 cents. There are other ways that you can make an hour's time worth much more than that.

It doesn't pay to set an economical a table that your children and your husband will have a craving for candy and between meals that will cost very much more than would be needed to set a really beautiful table.

Trees Hard to Kill.

When a tree is cut to the ground and the root is left to rot, all the forces seem to rally round the dormant leaf-buds contained in the old roots. Subsequently, strong new shoots grow, in much the same manner as from pollard willows.

With the exception of the pear and pesticide, the case is the same as with shrubs, because, frequently or inadvertently, some leaf-buds on the stem have been buried under the earth.

Although oak stakes are rarely found among those which flourish under such conditions, yet there is a case now in a Welsh rookery, where a piece of oak timber, supporting the roof, has developed branches like substantial trees, which have grown to a length of three or four feet.

These are thickly covered with fully opened leaves of pale green, tipped with pink.

They live in utter darkness, and present a most peculiar sight when revealed by the light of a passing safety lamp.

Get The Grinding Habit

If a food expert came along and outlined a plan to you whereby you could save from 12 to 28 per cent of the food you and your family have been in the habit of eating—if he outlined such a plan which would not necessitate any sacrifice on your part, you'd follow it, wouldn't you?

While we won't attempt to tell you how you and your family can live more cheaply, we will, however, undertake to outline a very simple plan whereby you can save from 12 to 28 per cent of the feed ordinarily eaten by your live stock, involving no sacrifice to the stock. It is just this—GRIND YOUR FEED!

Ground feed is readily digested so that the full food value is utilized and converted into beef, butter, horse power or pork. The saving over feeding whole feed, as already indicated, amounts to from 12 to 28 per cent, which represents the proportion of whole feed that passes through the intestinal tract undigested—wasted.

CONDENSED CLASSICS

PAUL AND VIRGINIA

By SAINT-PIERRE

Condensation by Irving Bacheller

Jacques Henri Bernardin de Saint-Pierre was born at Havre in 1737 and died at Eragny, near Pontoise in 1814. An emotional dreamer, an irascible personification of the rolling stone, Bernardin de Saint-Pierre was constantly wandering from one thing and place to another. Educated for an engineer's profession, he went to sea, served in the army, was discharged, received an appointment at Malta, held various posts at St. Petersburg, Warsaw, Dresden, Berlin, Mannheim, was superintendent of the Jardin des Plantes at Paris and professor at the Ecole Normale, was a member of the Institute, and was ever meeting with commissions and romantic adventures.

Yet he found time to write many volumes, of which the world remembers most as "Paul and Virginia" he received more signors which have remade the geographical boundaries and unity of France but of every country where books are read.

IN THE year 1726 a young man of Normandy brought to the Isle de France his young wife, whose family was of noble blood. Shortly afterward he was taken with the fever and died, leaving her alone on the isle.

Estranged from her family and without means, the young widow made her way to an uninhabited island where she could cultivate the soil without the payment of rent, and there she built a rude house for herself and her little child, a daughter whom she named Virginia.

At the same time another woman with a son named Paul settled on the same island, and the two women, naturally grateful for aid and comfort, became fast friends. Although they had been of different stations in life, husband of Marie, who was Madame de La Tour's hand maid. Bound to each other by similar needs the two lonely women spent much time together, and the two children were almost inseparable. Their attachment was very marked even from the cradle. If Virginia was in trouble, the cries of Paul made it known. When they learned to speak, the first names they learned to give each other were brother and sister. For the rest, they went almost naked, and could neither read nor write.

From the beauty of their bare limbs one might fancy them two of Niobe's children escaped from the marble.

As Madame de La Tour saw the unfolding charms of her daughter she became alarmed for her future and humbled herself to write to an old aunt in France asking for aid for Virginia's sake.

The aunt replied coldly, commending her to the governor of the island, adding: "Your disgraceful marriage has brought its righteous punishment."

Deserted by her kinsfolk, the poor widow took Paul and Virginia to her arms.

Paul became a planter, busy and skilful, while Virginia spun or tended the goats and helped in the house. Thus passed their innocent youth.

To them Madame de La Tour read the stories which time had hallowed, teaching them to find their happiness in serving others.

Their lives seemed bound up in that of the trees. They knew no historical epochs, no chronology save that of their orchards. No care wrinkled their brows, no intemperance poisoned their blood. They had all the freshness of the morning of life. They loved each other naturally and purely.

It was wise Marguerite who said: "Let us marry our children. Soon Paul will be a man, and then we will have much to fear."

Madame de La Tour hesitated. "Let us wait. Let us send Paul to India for a time. There he will be able to earn money with which to provide a home for himself and Virginia."

To this plan Paul would not consent. "I am needed here. Domingo is old and our workers are alone. I shall stay."

At this moment came another letter from the aunt in Normandy making clear Virginia be sent to her for education. "If she follows my wishes," the aunt wrote, "she may look forward to being my heiress."

Virginia was alarmed at this offer and Paul was angry. The necessaire decided against it.

The governor of the island now urged that Virginia be sent.

A missionary of the island joined the governor in urging that Virginia go to her kinswomen, and at last with a heart filled with anguish, mother and daughter, thinking it God's will, consented.

Paul was puzzled by all this secret council.

Meanwhile Virginia's consent had brought from her aunt gold to pay for clothes and jewels and her passage and she was a transformed being. In her muslin and taffeta, with her hair in the manner of the period, she looked the duchess, and Paul was thrown into despair at sight of her beauty and her alien magnificence.

Distressed by his grief and hoping to cure him of his false hopes, Marguerite now told him that he was only the illegitimate son of a peasant, while Virginia was the daughter of a noblewoman.

Paul, pressing her in his arms, assured her that as he had no other relative, he would love her the more. "But I see now why Madame de La Tour avoids me."

As the thought of losing Virginia came to him, Paul lost control of himself. Clasping her in his arms, he said: "I am going with you. Nothing shall part us. I swear it by the sea that I must cross, by the air, to which I have never breathed a lie."

Nevertheless, Virginia was taken away from him while he was wandering in the forest mad with his fears. When he returned to the cabin and found her gone, he rushed to a high point from which the outgoing vessel could be seen, and there he stood till the darkness fell and the night winds began to sing their songs in his ear.

Thereafter when he saw the two mothers weeping, he bitterly said, "Seek someone else to wipe away your tears."

At last he turned his thought to the garden and to a new task. He determined to learn to read. He wished to be able to read of the country to which his love had gone. In a very short time he was able to read, and when at last a letter came from Virginia he was able to read it for himself. It was a sweet letter, but not a cheerful one. The girl's heart was in her happy island, and she asked Paul to plant the flower seeds which she sent, upon the spot where they had last talked together—a place she called Farewell Rock.

As the months passed, various folk began to whisper that Virginia was about to marry a nobleman, and Paul was a prey to doubt and despair.

One morning at daybreak Paul saw a white flag flying on Mount Discovery. It was a sign that a ship was in the offing. A little later a letter from Virginia to Madame de La Tour was handed to Paul. Rapturously kissing it, he thrust it into his bosom and hastened to his home. To all the household assembled round the letter Virginia was coming home! She would soon land. Masters and servants all embraced.

"My son" said Madame de La Tour, "go tell all our neighbors, Virginia is coming home."

To this happy household a negro messenger came to say that the ship was in distress and firing guns for help. A storm was approaching. By midnight the sea was hammering the rocks with fearful roar. The sound of the signal guns was dreadful in Paul's ears. All night long he and his faithful Domingo waited for the dawn in silence and dread.

At dawn the governor with a file of soldiers arrived at a point near which the ship could be dimly seen in the fog. All signs pointed to a hurricane, and the people gathered in the hope of assisting the ship to land its passengers.

At 9 o'clock a whirlwind swept the harbor clear of fog and the ship was seen moored near the rocks. Her head was set toward the billows which rolled from the open sea.

Suddenly, in the midst of a terrible rush of sea, the cables parted. The ship was thrown upon the rocks. A cry of despair arose among those who stood on shore. Paul, in frenzy, was about to throw himself into the sea, when a strong hand prevented him. In order to save his life, they bound him fast with a long rope and let him leap into the water. He tried to reach the ship, only to be flung back upon the sands.

The crew threw themselves into the sea. Those on shore saw a young woman stretching out her arms in piteous entreaty. It was Virginia, almost the last to remain on board. In a moment she, too, was struggling in the cruel sea.

Paul, unconscious and bleeding from his last attempt to reach the ship, was carried to a neighboring house, while old Domingo and other friends searched the beach for the body of Virginia.

At last in despair they started back to tell Virginia's mother of the girl's tragic death. On the way some negroes told them that wreckage had been driven in at Palm River valley and so Domingo and his companion turned aside to look once again for the body.

There on the sand, half buried, not with a serene and beautiful face, lay the maiden, while about one hand seemed upon her breast, the other was pressed to her heart and covered a picture of Paul.

Lifting her gently, the servants carried her to a fisherman's hut and left her.

In the morning Paul was brought home. He had regained his senses but he could not utter a word. His reason had brought a ray of hope.

After a beautiful and touching ceremony, in which the black people took a part, they buried the lovely body on the western side of the church, at a point where she had often rested when on her way to mass, with Paul, and there a few weeks later they brought his body in order that he might rest forever by her side.

TOOK TIME TO DO THINGS

In "Ox-Cart Days" Men of Genius Did Their Literary Work Leisurely and Well.

How did they do it, those old fellows? Take a novel by Thackeray, for example. It is monumental. Looks as if one of them would be a life work. The mere penning of it appals a modern man. Yet Thackeray turned out volume after volume as if time and energy were interminable. And his work was practically perfect. No slovenliness, no carelessness, no haste, no guess-this-will-do-ness. Today we have every accessory to speed, every time-saving device, all knowledge classified and compendiumed and stored in convenient libraries. But where are the Thackerays? Or the Goethes, Dickenses, Hugos and Balzacs?

Men of their day were compelled to waste time. A journey of a few miles took all day, or several days. A dinner involved sitting up all night and drinking one's self under the table. A message to a friend was not a ten-word telegram, but a beautifully penned and excellently expressed essay. Such letters were preserved and handed down. Later they were put into print. How many letters have you written which will be handed down? And how would you like to have the best letter you ever wrote put into print? Chances are that if you write more than two pages you apologize. And you sign it, "Yours hastily."

The men of the ox-cart days did things thoroughly and well. In the days of the wireless, we "have no time."—Lynn (Mass.) Item.

Proved Himself Hard to Kill.

There are many cases on record of professional fasters doing without food for 40 days. Some few years ago a French soldier, Corporal Delpeche, fell into an old wine-shaft near Brest. He lay there, unable to get out, for 52 days and that without a morsel of food or drink. Yet at the end of that time he was able to call for assistance, and when got out, could tell his story. With proper care he completely recovered.

KINGSTON, N. Y., NOV. 16, 1920.

Knut Hamsun, a Norwegian poet who once was a horse-car conductor in Chicago, has won the Nobel prize in literature for 1920, but the Swedish committee never fails to keep the award money in Scandinavia whenever there is the ghost of a shadow of an excuse.

The Socialists claim two million votes for their party as compared with less than a million in 1912. Even if the claim be confirmed, it will have less significance than they suppose, because the voting in general was enormously increased by the participation of women.

The London Times assures the Prince of Wales that the consort of the next King of England need not be of royal blood. Whether the Prince is of the same opinion will be more certainly known after he does his courting and makes announcement.

PATERNALISM.

If the legislature this coming year can teach the people something about the dangers of paternalism some good will be done for the state of New York. No intelligent person is against progress, but there is a wide gulf between progress and mere novelty. That there should be legislation to improve conditions under which we live everybody agrees. There is always room for improvement. But there is a marked contrast between evolution and revolution and some of the recommendations within the past year or two would have bankrupted the state had they been enacted into law. As it is, taxes have mounted to a startling figure and they will climb higher unless someone has the courage to present the facts as they are and the intelligence to educate the people as to the proper functions of government.

Political expediency may prompt some individuals to urge paternalistic measures. But they should be blocked unless they are in keeping with orderly progress. Blocking them would place a check on anybody with a wild scheme walking into the capitol and demanding the passage of such legislation under a threat that the people want it, when as a matter of truth the people as a whole know nothing whatever about it. This is the method of the few who always claim to be the whole, or to represent the whole. These experiments have been costly, extremely so to the taxpayers. It is about time to call a halt on professional propagandists who are working for themselves, and selfishly so, and who represent nobody but themselves, which invariably leads to class legislation, the most dangerous of all practices under our form of government.

There should be forward-looking action by the legislature, but abject paternalism which is in direct opposition to fixed principles of government, the principles upon which government is founded and upon which it must survive should be curtailed. Which suggestions are made to reform the state they should be investigated so that if adopted they will not deform it. At any rate the legislature should keep its eyes to the front and not be blinded by paternalism under the name of social welfare or any other title. Whatever is done along paternalistic lines should be based upon fixed principles of government and not upon pitfle.

BURLESON'S DIAGNOSIS

Discussing the result of the recent election, Postmaster General Burleson is quoted as attributing Democratic defeat to failure of the Democratic managers to charge the drop in farm prices to the Republicans, and ingratitude on the part of labor.

While it would have been entirely in keeping with the dishonesty of Democratic methods to attempt to fasten upon the Republicans responsibility for decline of prices of farm products, there is no possibility that such a charge could have been made with hope of success. The country knows that the deflation program was in the hands of the Federal Reserve Board, a Democratic organization, and from the beginning of the deflation movement, the farmers themselves fixed the responsibility. Leaders in politics took the subject up only after the farmers started the discussion. There was no capital in that subject for the Democrats. Undoubtedly prices will continue to recede, and there are many evidences in our foreign trade statistics that there will be a curtailment of production in America, with resultant cutting down of payrolls. In accordance with the Burleson suggestion, the Democrats will undoubtedly try to fix responsibility for all unemployment upon the Republicans. Files of Democratic newspapers will show, however, when the period of decline began. The Democratic party claimed credit for the war prosperity, augmented on paper by the inflation built up by the Federal Reserve Board, and it cannot deny responsibility for the reaction.

As to the Burleson claim that labor has been ungrateful, one might well ask, "Ungrateful for what?" If the Democratic party especially favored labor during its period of administration it was guilty of establishing class government, and was fit subject for universal condemnation. If it did not favor labor, there was no occasion for any demonstration of gratitude. By intimating that labor should have shown gratitude, Mr. Burleson practically charges his party with favoritism. When he credits labor with not supporting the Democratic nominee, he unwittingly pays labor a compliment. As a matter of fact, Republicans have stood for all the legitimate demands of labor. The Democratic administration cooperated with some of the leaders of organized labor but to the disadvantage of the permanent interests of labor as a whole. Mr. Gompers was duly grateful, and showed his gratitude, but he had only one vote.

QUEENS URGES A FAIR DEAL

Business Men Go on Record For Fair Treatment of Public Utility Concerns—Should Have Revenue To Meet Present Conditions.

The Chamber of Commerce of Queens Borough has gone on record as very emphatically in favor of permitting public utility companies to charge a rate for their service which shall be sufficient to pay all operating expenses, maintain all plants in good condition, keep up the credits of the companies and pay a fair return upon the capital invested in the properties.

At a recent meeting the chamber adopted a resolution holding that public utility companies could not furnish an adequate and dependable service without adequate rates. The resolution follows:

"Whereas, The Chamber of Commerce of the Borough of Queens recognize that the best interests of the community require that its public utilities, including the surface, elevated and subway railroads, both electric and steam, as well as gas, telephone, electric and water companies should perform their obligations to furnish adequate, continuous and dependable service to their patrons, the public, and

"Whereas, Such service cannot be furnished unless the rates collected therefor are sufficient to pay operating expenses, maintain the plants in condition capable of rendering efficient service, maintain its credit and pay a fair return upon the capital invested in the property devoted to the public use; now therefore be it

"Resolved, That the Chamber of Commerce of the Borough of Queens demands that the municipal and other public authorities having supervision or regulatory power, contractual or otherwise, over the rates of public utilities take such action as may be necessary in order that such corporations may hereafter charge rates sufficient to enable them to pay all expenses of operation, including maintenance of plant and equipment, maintain its credit, as well as a fair return upon the capital invested in the property devoted to the public use, and in consideration of such adequate rates for service the public utilities be required to render proper and efficient service to the public."

HEALTH TALKS AT PHOENICIA

Physical Education Conference of Fourth Supervisory District Held Friday—Program of Regents' Examinations.

A general physical education conference for the Fourth Supervisory District of Ulster County was held at Phoenicia on Friday, November 12. Practically all the teachers from that district were present. Miss Mae Schiel of New York city was in charge of the conference.

The forenoon session was given over to explanations and demonstrations of the next five weeks' work. Some special things were discussed such as health clubs, school lunches and health inspection.

Some good suggestions for hot lunches may be obtained by writing to the Department of the Interior, Bureau of Education, Washington, D. C., and asking for copies of pamphlets No. 6 and 7.

From Monday, November 15 to Friday, November 19 is to be "No Cold Week." Some suggestions for avoiding colds were. Avoid drafts; avoid overheating; avoid over dressing indoors; have plenty of fresh air; deep breathing, rubbers to be worn on wet days and to be taken off in school; proper use of handkerchief.

Miss Schiel gave an interesting and amusing "Chalk Talk" on the use of the handkerchief in connection with suggestion No. 7.

The first part of the afternoon session was given to the new games and to explaining the Rural School Physical Ability Tests. The pupils are divided into two groups, juniors and seniors. The juniors are ages from 8 to 11 and the seniors over 11. The events are as follows.

Boys

50 yard dash
Standing broad jump
Chinning

Girls.

50 yard dash.
Bean bag distance throw.
Tossing and catching

The bean bags used must measure 6 inches by 6 inches and weigh 1½ pounds each. These should be part of the equipment of every school.

The latter part of the afternoon Superintendent Andrews talked over various school matters with the teachers.

A new teachers' retirement law goes into effect August 1, 1921. Under this law teachers will pay 4 per cent of their salaries each year instead of the present 1 per cent. Teachers may elect whether they wish to join this new retirement plan or not and they are given until August 1, 1922 to decide.

The Regents examinations will be held the week of January 17-21, 1921, at the following places in the Fourth Supervisory District: Pine Hill, Phoenicia, Woodstock, West Shokan.

The program follows.

Monday, January 17, 1921, afternoon, Elementary English; Tuesday morning, arithmetic, afternoon, spelling; Wednesday morning, geography, afternoon, Elementary U. S. History with Civics.

The standing in writing is usually marked from the English papers. Pupils who are taking their last examination should take reading.

The examination for Rural School Renewable Certificates is held the same week.

Wednesday, morning, School Law and English for Teachers; afternoon, School Management and Nature Study. Thursday afternoon, Methods of Teaching. Friday morning, History of Education.

These examinations are held at Phoenicia only. All teachers on temporary licenses should attend these examinations.

The next conference will be held at Phoenicia on January 4, 1921 and at Ashokan, January 11, 1921.

Making Glass of Rice Husks.

Experiments have been carried out in Burma with the idea of utilizing the silica content of paddy, rice husks, in the manufacture of glass. On burning the husks about 18 per cent of white ash is obtained, and, although this ash contains small quantities of iron, it has been proved to be suitable for the manufacture of glass having a pale green or yellow color. In burning the husks sufficient heat is generated to carry out the various processes.

"How do they do it and why do they do it?" asked the customer in dramatic tones as he entered the barber shop and slumped down in a chair with an air of weariness.

"What are you trying to do?" retorted the busy barber, "compose a popular song?"

"Worse than that," replied the customer, "I was coming down on the car this noon and two fair young damsels got aboard, and believe me I could hardly keep my eyes off their heads."

"What did they have some unpopular tenants," asked the barber.

"No they did not," retorted the customer; "but they had cootie garages though."

"That's nothing, the most of them are wearing them these days," replied the barber.

"Is that what they call those puffs hiding their ears?" asked the customer.

"So they tell me," said the barber, "and it seems queer that you have been living all these past few months and never noticed a cootie garage before."

"But how do they do it?" persisted the customer, "that is one question I would like answered. As I said these two young ladies that got on the car they had their hair done up the queerest I have ever seen. They had it flat on top like a pancake and then they fluffed it out at the sides."

"Probably an imitation bobbed hair effect," suggested the barber.

"Maybe," returned the customer, "you got me."

"Well you said it was flat on the top," said the barber.

"Yes it was," replied the customer, "and then they had it parted in the middle with a little bang hanging down in the middle of the forehead. Then they drew it tight across the head and down at the sides in rolls all around the head except the ears which were hidden from sight by these gas tanks as you called them."

"I said garages, not tanks," explained the barber patiently.

"Well no matter what you call them," continued the customer. "I bet they don't prevent the owner from hearing everything that goes on."

"You said it that time," agreed the barber, "but as to where the style came from, which I take it is the question you want answered, you have me, but judging from other styles that have come and gone I should imagine that some movie queen first introduced it on the screen and it was taken up by the patrons of the movie house."

"I'll say it must take some time to do it up then," commented the customer.

"Time is nothing in the young life of a female," replied the barber sagely. "if she thinks she is adding to her attractiveness."

COTTEKILL.

Cottekill, Nov. 15.—In accordance with past practice the members of Cottekill Council, No. 168, Jr. Order of United American Mechanics, of this village, will attend divine service on Sunday, November 21, at the Cottekill Reformed Church, this being the regular Thanksgiving service, and the rules of this organization require them to attend divine service at this time.

The members of this council are requested by the councilor, to meet at its rooms at 2:30 on Sunday afternoon, November 21. From the council rooms the members will go in a body to the church where the service begins at 3 o'clock. The members will wear regalias and white gloves and to those who may not have white gloves, a supply will be for sale at the council rooms at cost price. This council has not attended divine service in a body for the past two or three years, and it being an organization believing in a Supreme Being, and the Bible being the foundation upon which the order is founded, it is necessary that we should attend a Thanksgiving service each year, and it is desired that every member who can do so be present at this service

The pastor of the church has a special Thanksgiving sermon for this service, and extends to the organization a hearty invitation to attend

The service will be held unless the members should be very stormy, we could not even though the weather should look threatening, and it is to make this a real Thanksgiving service to our Heavenly Father for the many blessings we have had and enjoyed during the past year.

JAIL TO LOSE 3 PRISONERS

Watkins, Decker and Delamater Start For Dannemora Soon—Delamater's Record Causes Court to Disregard Plea For Reformatory Sentence.

Sheriff Smith expects to start in a day or two for Dannemora state prison with George Watkins, the negro who was sentenced to serve life or twenty years for murder in the second degree, and with Decker and Delamater sentenced each to a maximum term of four or a minimum term of two years for robbery in the first degree in holding up and robbing men in the town of Wawarsing. Collins, who was a companion of Delamater and Decker in the holdups and was sentenced to the State Reformatory at Elmira, is at that institution. John DeVany of Ellenville made a strong plea before Judge Fowler, Monday, to have Delamater given a reformatory sentence, and Delamater's mother, an old lady, also pleaded for her son, who is 25 years of age. District Attorney Traver, said he never opposed leniency when the prisoner merited it, but in this case he opposed anything but a prison sentence. A careful investigation of Delamater's life had been made, not only by himself, but also by the judge, and Delamater had not only had been at Randall's Island, but he and the other two, Decker and Collins, not only held up and robbed people one night, but did the same thing on the following night. The court said that his investigation had convinced him that the prisoner was responsible for his actions in the robbery cases, and therefore he would send him to Dannemora, which he did for a minimum term of two years and a maximum term of four years. Delamater shook hands with Judge Fowler after being sentenced and promised that he would lead a model life after his discharge from prison. Mrs. Delamater and her other son also shook hands with Judge Fowler after the sentence. The Rev. A. L. Hughes, of the St. Mark's A. M. E. Church, who was present in court, and who had baptized Delamater in jail with Watkins, offered consolation to Delamater.

MATTERS BEFORE SURROGATE GILL

The contest over the judicial settlement of the account of Harry H. Terwilliger, as administrator of the estate of Edwin Enderly of the town of Gardiner, was closed before Surrogate Gill in surrogate's court Monday morning.

After the case had been summed up by counsel representing the various parties, Surrogate Gill announced his decision and directed the form for the decree. He allows the claim of Howard B. Humiston for $80 for the funerals of Mr. Enderly, his two brothers and one sister, all of whom died within two weeks before Edwin Enderly's death during the influenza epidemic two years ago, holding that Mr. Enderly had given directions for the funerals of his brothers and sister and had become responsible therefor.

The decree will be prepared and presented later. John N. Vanderlyn appeared for Administrator Terwilliger, with Judge Jenkins of counsel; Virgil R. Van Wagenen appeared for Undertaker Howard B. Humiston; DeWitt W. Ostrander and Andrew Wright Lent appeared for other interested parties.

PHOENICIA.

Phoenicia, Nov. 15.—Miss Harriet Loomis entertained a party of friends from Hunter, the Misses Hetty Cartright, Florence Rattis; Messrs. Alex Howard and Morris Barisky.

The Aid met Thursday in the ladies' room. Mrs. Grant was reelected president; Mrs. Simpson, vice president; Mrs. Bouse, secretary and treasurer. It was decided to hold a chicken supper at the Tremble Inn the date to be fixed later.

A very nice supper was given the M. E. S. S. children Friday evening. At the close of supper ice cream was served. A large number was present and grown ups as well as the children enjoyed the supper and social time. Much credit is due the superintendent and teachers of the Sunday school and others who planned and conducted the service.

Miss Grace Henry visited her friend Nancy Berridge Thursday night. She attended the Teachers' Conference here Friday.

The shooting of buck, year after year and last year so many were shot that at last we see distinctly the scarcity. Those who get a deer this season have to work well. Places where last year deer was killed seem to be entirely deerless and the hunters seek other fields. In one section nine does have been seen and no buck at all. The latest brought in is a dandy. Bob Gross and Harry Elridge were the successful hunters.

Harriet T. Loomis attended a leap year party at Hunter Friday evening.

The cold snap and snow squall seemed to get us unprepared and so we felt it severely. It won't be so bad when we get used to it.

Miss Verna Boice is spending a few days with friends at Albany.

We are glad to have Miss Lorna Van Demark back with us again. She has been spending several weeks with friends at Catskill.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Woolheater have moved to Shandaken. Mrs. Hoffman and family of Mt. Pleasant have moved in the rooms vacated by R. Smith and family.

The Rev. Mr. Vaughn and family will soon move to Wappingers Falls where the Rev. Mr. Vaughn will become pastor of the Baptist Church.

Mrs. O. Hill and Mrs. H. Clancy spent Thursday at Kingston.

The automobile has taken away the once known barn hospitality. They require no manger, no hay or oats. Now and then a party with the horse power comes through and finds it very hard to get a place to put his horses in over night. One party failing to get the accommodation kept driving on hoping further he might. The result was that he over drove and the horses were so jaded that one died.

Don't forget the prayer meeting in the M. E. and Baptist church on Wednesday evening of each week.

Was Well Fixed.

One of the churches in a western town is so fortunate as to have a young woman as its pastor. She was called to the door of the parsonage one day, and saw there a much embarrassed young farmer of the Swedish type.

"They said the minister lived in this house," he stammered.

"Yes," replied the fair pastor.

"Well—well—I'd—er—like to get married."

"To get married? Very well, I can marry you," said the minister encouragingly.

"Oh, but I've got a girl already," was the [illegible] reply.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

New York, Nov. 16.—Stock market conditions were maintained at the opening today as they were at the close yesterday. Leading stocks were active and strong and made sharp advances, while some specialties including the copper group were heavy and without special demand. Gains in the leading issues ranged from 1 to over 3 points with the supply of stock at advances so scant as to be the subject of comment. Steel Common advanced ⅝ to 83⅝. American Sugar refining, which loaned at a premium last night, rose 2⅝ to 100. Reading advanced 1 point to 91⅛. Atlantic Gulf opened up 1⅜ to 115 and Marine Preferred was 2¼ higher at 54¼. Anaconda continued in supply, yielding ⅝ to 41⅝, but Utah Copper rose ⅞ at 53½.

The advance at the opening broadened during the forenoon, many issues making rather sharp gains. Steel Common was well taken, advancing to 83⅞. Mexican Petroleum rose 3½ to 166¼. The gain of 2⅝ in American Sugar Refining to 100 was followed by brisk buying of Cuba-American Sugar, which rose 3½ to 34. Atlantic Gulf advanced 3⅜ to 117 and Marine Preferred was up 3¼ to 55¼ Southern Pacific reflected renewed accumulation, advancing 1½ to 11⅜, and Reading moved up 1½ to 91⅜. Anaconda developed a strong tone, advancing from 41⅜ to 43.

The market closed weak; government bonds unchanged; railway and other bonds steady.

Measuring Mammoth Cave.

An odd method has been used in measuring the height of some of the great chambers in the Mammoth cave. The experimenter had little balloons made of a special pattern, with thinner and more elastic rubber than that of common toy balloons. Then, with five balloons tied in a cluster, and each inflated with hydrogen to a diameter of 10 inches, he began his attempts. An acetylene light revealed the balloons when they touched the top. The measuring tape was a light thread. The Rotunda was found to be just 40 feet high, and the Mammoth dome 119 feet 6 inches. But in the vast temple called Gorin's dome, wandering air-currents rendered the balloons unmanageable.

Writings Ascribed to Jews.

It is believed today by many savants that the Old Testament description of Solomon's temple was written by the Jews after their return from captivity, with the memory of the real splendors of Babylon fresh in their minds, says Austruther Mackay, writing in the Atlantic Monthly.

It is possible that the actual temple was a simple place of worship. If it had been otherwise, it is hardly possible that no remains of it would be visible today, seeing that the temples of Egypt, which are so much older, remain, in some cases, almost in tact.

In His "Ain Countrie."

As a boy Sir James Barrie was the despair of his teachers. In fact he was marked down by them, according to an English weekly, as the laziest lad in his school, Dumfries academy. This was remembered against him when, after achieving fame and fortune, he returned for a while to his native village of Kirriemuir—the "Thrums" of his books.

"Puir Jamie!" they exclaimed, shaking their heads dolefully. "Puir Jamie! He was aye that delicate, and aye that lazy! No wonder he had to tak to writin' buiks for a livin'."

BACK TO HIS IDEAL

By R. RAY BAKER

(©, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

The three years' war was over and Leonard Moore was going home.

The war in question had nothing to do with England, France or Germany. It was a private family war—between Leonard Moore and J. Griffen Moore. Perhaps it had better be termed a rupture in relations, for no shots were fired.

In his hand Leonard held the terms of peace. They were contained in a letter from J. Griffen Moore, who happened to be his father. The situation was summed up in the closing paragraph of the letter:

"So the doors of the old home are open to you. I learn from reliable sources that you have settled down and made good as an automobile salesman. It has been a trying three years for me, all alone in the big house except for the servants, but I believe it has done us both good, and we will understand each other better when you return. There is only one obligation I will place you under; that is that you marry at once, and of course it must be some one in your own class. Mazie Dixon would suit me, and you used to appear extremely fond of her. I'll look for you shortly."

It was the first communication from his father since the latter sent him out into the world to shift for himself three years ago. It was after Leonard's second expulsion from college that the break occurred.

Leonard had steadfastly refused to shoulder any responsibility in life, had never been vicious, but had traveled with a clique that was not noted for its thrifty propensities or its mild forms of amusement; had openly defied hard and fast regulations of the school and had ended his career there with an extemporaneous valedictory address delivered in the presence of the faculty when the latter summoned him before it and which was far from being a eulogy.

The summons had resulted from a series of misdemeanors which had come to the faculty's attention, but when the faculty tried to express its opinion as to the merit of Leonard's sundry escapades the latter usurped the stage and expressed his ideas concerning the faculty, collectively and individually. He went home by the next train, bag and baggage.

When J. Griffen Moore shut the door of his magnificent home that night Leonard was on the outside with $500 in his pocket with which to "try to make something of yourself."

It woke Leonard up and, taking an inventory of himself, he decided it was high time to assume a different attitude toward life. Heretofore he had been irresponsible, because his father was wealthy and he was the only heir; consequently there had been no occasion to shoulder responsibility.

Now, of a sudden, there was plenty of occasion. He had been disowned by his parent, and his reasoning faculties told him J. Griffen Moore was right. So he went to work.

Three years later found Leonard a successful salesman, rooming at a place where other young business men and women made their homes. He had responsibilities, and he was glad of it.

Not once had he implored aid of his father. He was proud of himself, but not too proud to go back home when invited. Leonard had no particular liking for hard work, and he knew his father would get him a position where that kind of activity played a minor role. He had worked hard, but because he had to.

His heart filled with exultation, which showed in his eyes, he left his room and walked down the hall, pausing before a door, on which he knocked. It was opened by a pretty brunette, rather diminutive, attractive, intelligent young woman, who smiled him welcome and invited him to a chair.

"It's come, Minnie," he announced gleefully. "Father has relented, and I'm to go home. The world is rosy once more."

She walked to the window and looked out. The smile disappeared from her face when her back was turned to him.

"Tell me about it," she said.

He did. There was no reason why he shouldn't, because Minnie had been his confidante ever since he came to room here. They had been great friends—nothing more than that—and had spent many an evening together, discussing their hopes and ambitions. Minnie edited the woman's page on one of the newspapers, but had an intense yearning to become a police reporter.

They don't have women police reporters," she said, "but I don't understand why, seeing that they have women policemen. Anyhow, I want to be one. I'm tired of fashions and divorces and marriages and other heart throbs of the feminine world. I'd like to handle murders."

So Leonard told her how the rupture in relations was about to terminate and suggested they go out to dinner in celebration of the event, because on the morrow he would return home. But she insisted that they simply have one of their "chatty seances," as she expressed it.

"I suppose before long you will be married," she observed, "to one of your former sweethearts?"

This extracted a sigh from Leonard.

"Yes, I suppose I will. At least I hope to. Mazie Dixon always was my ideal. She's the most wonderful girl I ever met—a pronounced blonde with blue eyes—and she certainly would make me happy. I have always been insane over her, but of course when I left home I was obliged to give her up. Now it will be different."

He gave vent to another sigh, which was echoed by Minnie, no doubt out of sympathy for him, although there appeared to be little occasion for sympathy.

In the morning Leonard severed his connection with the auto sales company. The manager was not at all pleased, because Leonard had been a valuable man; but he was told that a place would be open for him any time he might care to return.

Then Leonard went to his father's office, where an affectionate greeting took place, and that night Leonard was formally welcomed back into the old home with a dinner party, at which young ladies and young gentlemen of "his class" were guests.

Among the guests was Mazie, and her greeting was effusive.

"I've missed you a lot," she said. "It would seem that you might have dropped me a line now and then."

"I was in no position to consider you as a—a friend," he reminded her. "I was just a poor working man. It would not have been the right thing, exactly."

"Perhaps you are right," she agreed. "But now we are back on the same level once more, and I shall expect you to make up for lost time and take me to all the best parties and dances and theaters."

While this conversation was taking place Minnie sat alone in her room pounding a dilapidated typewriter, trying to grind out material for her page. Leonard did not know that she had laid aside this work on more than one occasion in order to receive him and that it made the performance of her duties the next day doubly hard.

On this particular night the rickety machine would not run smoothly. Sheet after sheet of paper was torn up and finally Minnie admitted defeat, covered the typewriter, turned out the lights and moved her chair to the window, where she spent a silent hour, meditating.

It was only a sample of her program on several succeeding nights. A month after Leonard's exit from her life she sat thus at the window, lamenting the flight of inspiration, when a knock on the door intruded on her thoughts:

She exclaimed, wearily, "Come in," thinking perhaps it was the bothersome Miss Jenkins on a borrowing quest for the current magazines, or Mrs. Shear seeking a cupful of sugar, or Miss Haverhill with the latest gossip.

Instead a man stood at the opening when the door was thrown back. As the light was out she could not see who it was, but she could discern that he carried two suitcases. She pressed the electric switch and the light shone on the face of Leonard Moore.

"Back?" she exclaimed. "Did your father change his mind?"

"No," he said grimly, setting the suitcases in the hall and entering the room. "No, he didn't change his mind—but I did. Minnie, my three years of work have spoiled me for a life of leisure. Dad and I are on friendly terms all right, but I'm going to take my job back."

She motioned him to a chair, but he remained standing.

"How about your ideal?" she inquired. "Why aren't you with her tonight?"

He walked up close to her, his face carrying an expression she had never seen before.

"Minnie," he said, and there was a peculiar softness in his voice. "Mazie Dixon isn't my ideal; she belongs to the Leonard Moore who used to be and who didn't know any better. You ask me why I am not with my ideal tonight and I answer that I am with her. I've been living three years under the same roof with her and I have just found it out."

Assert Ruin Was Chief's Home.

Casa Grande ruin, Arizona, is claimed by the Pima Indians who dwell in its neighborhood as the habitation of one of their ancient chiefs. They designate it by several names, among which are Vaaki, Old House; Civanavaaki, Old House of the Chief; and Sialim Civanavaaki, Old House of Chief Morning Green.

Casa Grande was a ruin when discovered and has not been permanently inhabited since first seen by white man. The walls of this historic structure are of a fawn color, slightly tinged with red. Externally they are rough, but internally are plastered and still showing places that formerly were as smooth as "Pueblo pottery."

Center of Population Moving.

How many of us can tell off-hand the exact center of the population of the United States? Every ten years the government calculates with great accuracy just where this point lies. The center moves westward at the rate of about fifty miles every ten years. When the center was first calculated in 1790 it lay three miles east of Baltimore, Md. In the first ten years it moved forty miles westward. By 1880 it had reached the State of Ohio and is today crawling slowly across the State of Indiana. In 130 years, says Boys' Life, the point has traveled westward about 600 miles.

Real Criticism.

"How did Minnie get to be so excellent a musical critic?"

"By listening attentively to all the things musicians say about one another."

MOTOR BUNGALOW IS LATEST INVENTION

Glenn H. Curtiss, the celebrated airplane inventor and builder, has come to the fore with a "motor bungalow," which in compactness and serviceability, far surpasses any vehicle yet produced along those lines.

The idea back of the car is that of a miniature Biltmore which is easily hitched to an automobile and can be whisked along at a speed of from 50 to 60 miles an hour without the occupants being conscious of the added burden.

The useful characteristic of the attached car comes when it is opened for camp service. By raising the sides and inserting screen frames, the car may be made up into two complete rooms with ample sleeping facilities for two people in the fore end and four people in the aft end. There is a full screen equipment for protection against flies and mosquitoes. A door at the rear leads to a compartment where equipment necessary to put up camp is stored.

A kitchen, pantry, toilet facilities, ice box, electric lights, a running water system and a tent cot for the use of the chauffeur are amongst its improvements.

LUBRICATION IS OF IMPORTANCE

Life of Engine and Car Depends on Proper Oiling of Many Different Parts.

PREVENT METALS TOUCHING

To Avoid Trouble With Bearings or Cylinders Put in an Extra Pint of Oil Every Hundred Miles—Don't Wait for Squeak.

"The life of your engine and car depends upon lubrication," is the subject of an article appearing in a recent issue of an automobile magazine.

The principle of lubrication is to prevent any two pieces of metal that are working one against the other from touching. This is accomplished by having a film of oil between these two metals. Upon this film of oil depends the life of bearings, cylinders and piston rings. Only three different grades of lubricants are used. The owner should provide himself with a supply of gas cylinder oil, grease and steam engine oil.

Right Oil for Engine.

Never use steam engine oil or anything but a pure mineral oil in the engine. Fast running or riding over heavy and hilly roads uses up oil much faster than city driving. Put in an extra pint of oil every hundred miles or so. This precaution will avoid trouble with bearings or cylinders.

Once a month or every thousand miles, the oil in the crank case should be drained off and a fresh supply poured in. The oil may be drained by removing the drain plug at the bottom of oil pan. After draining, flush the crank case with kerosene through the breather pipe, replace drain plug and refill with clean oil. Be absolutely sure that all the kerosene is drained off, otherwise it will mix with the fresh oil and will cut down its lubricating qualities.

Trouble Follows Squeak.

Don't wait until you hear a "squeak" before oiling. A "squeak" means a rusted or dry bearing, and when once in that condition trouble soon follows.

The compact construction of some cars makes necessary the placing of oil holes and grease cups under the floor boards of the car. Don't, because it might cause you a little extra trouble, forget to remove them and lubricate as directed.

PREVENT RATTLES IN DOORS

Apply Small Piece of Rubber to Fill Out Vibrating Space—Anti-Rattlers Are Very Good.

When something seems to rattle around the body of your machine and you don't know just what it is, get someone to hold the doors tight while you drive, says American Motorist. If that stops the rattle, get some anti-rattlers for the doors and apply them; or fasten a small piece of rubber on your door to fill out the vibrating space.

ATTACH CABLE TO BATTERY

In Case of Emergency Insulation May Be Stripped Back for Two or Three Inches.

In cases of emergency, it is possible to attach a cable to the battery by stripping back the insulation for two or three inches, prying apart the strands and then placing a washer on each side of the cable, after which the nut is screwed down, holding the cable firmly in place.

WOULD YOU BELIEVE?

The first New York automobile show was in 1900.

In 1898 gasoline sold for six cents a gallon.

The first four cylinder car brought out in 1900.

In 1896 Barnum & Bailey announced that they would exhibit a horseless carriage.

In 1898 Gen. Nelson A. Miles, Chauncey M. Depew and John Jacob Astor were judges of the second automobile contest held in this country.

There were only four automobiles in the United States in 1896.

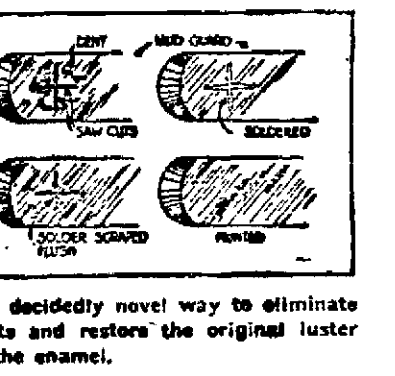
The first long-distance auto tour from Cleveland to New York was made in ten days.

The first transcontinental run from New York to San Francisco was made in two months.

TAKE DENTS OUT OF GUARDS

Difficult Task May Be Performed by Cutting Out Protruding Parts and Soldering.

During my experience as a mechanic in the automobile business, I have found that to remove dents in fenders and mudguards is a rather difficult job. To try and hammer them out, flat, will only buckle the dent from one side to the other.



A decidedly novel way to eliminate dents and restore the original luster of the enamel.

A better method is to saw the dent or protruding portion into an X-shape (see illustration). The saw-cuts will relieve the strain and the dent can then be hammered out. The saw-cuts are hammered out flat, soldered up, the solder being scraped flush. When the section is repainted one cannot tell where the dent formerly was.—William Farrell in Popular Science Monthly.

Modest Birthplace of Holy Cross; Great College Plans to Expand

HOLY CROSS WHEN FOUNDED IN 1843

HOLY CROSS COLLEGE, one of the oldest institutions of higher education in New England, having reached the limits of its development with its present buildings, the alumni and former students of the school have started a movement for expansion. It is planned to add five new buildings to the campus at Worcester, Mass., a students' dormitory, a chapel, a lecture and science hall, an assembly and dining hall and an administration building.

Holy Cross was founded in 1843 in a small frame building. It has grown steadily since and the original building was replaced years ago, but even with its present facilities it is forced to close its doors to scores of students every year because of lack of room for them. The alumni movement for an expansion to relieve that condition is taking form rapidly.

A. H. G. Fokker, inventor of the famous Fokker airplane, and Mrs. Fokker, who recently arrived from Europe. Mr. Fokker is here to introduce his famous machine in this country. The Fokker planes were used by the Germans during the war, and were considered the best of the planes used by either side. Mr. Fokker is but thirty years old and is Dutch, ... the war he has moved his plants ... Germany to Holland. The young inventor predicted that ... years ... we shall cross the ocean from London to New York in less than a day in giant airplanes."

SMITH ESTATE IN SURROGATE'S COURT

Judge Clearwater Urges Immediate Closing And Distribution, While Executors Point With Pride To Their Record.

As the result of the hearing before Surrogate Gill in the surrogate's court Monday afternoon in the matter of the estate of the late George J. Smith of this city, an effort will be made by the legatees to agree on a plan of division of the assets of the estate, for the most of which, according to testimony and statements before Surrogate Gill, there is not at present any demand and which, therefore cannot easily be converted into cash. The amount of cash now in the hands of the executors amounts to about $50,000.

Former Supreme Court Justice M. Linn Bruce and John T. Harwood two of the executors, were represented by Raymond Ballantine of New York city, Mrs. Laura N. Smith executrix and also residuary legatee, was represented by Nathan Burkan of New York city with Judge Clearwater, of counsel, John T. McGovern of New York appeared for Edna Griffiths; Kellogg and Rose of New York appeared by Darius J. L. Spain for Katherine Booth; Arthur C. Connelly for Mrs. Dora Hardenburgh; Edwin C. Mulligan for the estate of the late Hon. Charles Beckett of New York; Virgil B. Van Wagonen for the Industrial Home; Elmer E. Storey of Bayside for the Bayside National Bank; Corporation Counsel William D. Brinnier for the mayor and the Y. M. C. A., and Philip Elting for William C. Shafer, president of the Ulster County Savings Institution.

Objections were filed to the account by Mrs. Smith, who demanded in her objections that the executors close the estate and make their final account, and objected to a continuance of management by the two accounting executors on the ground that the same has been extravagant and wasteful. She also objected because the accounting executors were not asking the advice of Surrogate Gill as to distribution of cash on hand or disposition of unliquidated securities. The executors, she claimed, had expended $21,000 for legal expenses.

At the outset of the hearing, Mr. Ballantine, for Messrs. Bruce and Harwood, moved to strike out the objections, which was denied by Surrogate Gill. Mr. Ballantine stated that the total legal expenses, covering nearly seven years, amounted to $14,032.61, of which one-half had been paid for professional services by the two executors, $3,746 to attorneys representing Mrs. Smith in her capacity as executrix, and the balance represented executors' commissions and allowances. Claims of the estate of Mr. Beckett, who represented two of the executors up to the time of his death, amounting to $9,500, and of Frederick E. W. Darrow for $1,200, have not been paid.

Judge Clearwater objected to payment of the Beckett claim. Mr. Mulligan, counsel for the Beckett estate, said he considered it necessary to begin a special proceeding in order to have this claim determined, but after considerable argument finally concluded that he was regularly in court and the claim could be determined in the regular way. Judge Clearwater asked whether it was true a stipulation had been made to the effect that if the amount paid by the executors to Mr. Beckett should exceed the amount determined by the surrogate as just compensation, such excess should be refunded to the estate. Judge Bruce said such a stipulation had been made with all attorneys.

Judge Clearwater answering the motion made by Mr. Ballantine to strike out the objections filed by Mrs. Smith, said he assumed that she, as a legatee, had a right to file objections to the account. There had been a grave question in the minds of both Mr. Burkan and himself whether they ought not to apply for a re-opening of the entire estate and a rehearing of the entire matter. His personal judgment was not to do it because it would involve the estate in long and expensive litigation by which the estate would be depleted far more than it had been. He called attention to the fact that the will did not create trustees but only charged the executors with the duty of closing the estate. Apparently under the advice of Mr. Beckett both Mr. Bruce and Mr. Harwood had treated themselves as trustees. Mrs. Smith was asking that the estate be closed, the assets be converted into cash and the estate distributed under the terms of the will. It was seven years since they qualified and the estate was still open. Now they came in court and asked only limited advice of the surrogate. The only advice they should seek was to forthwith close the estate. Never had he known of such a lingering disposition to dispose of assets of an estate as in this estate. His position was that the two executors had been ill-advised. Judge Beckett, on whose advice they acted had received $7,250, without going in the question whether that amount was excessive. Mrs. Smith ... the further bill of $... as extortionate.

Both Mr. Bruce and Mr. Harwood, said Judge Clearwater, were eminent men but they simply had placed themselves absolutely upon the advice of their counsel and had been ill-advised. Assets of the estate, he said, consisted largely of bonds of the Acker, Merrall & Condit Company due in 1923. The principal business of that company had been selling ... but came the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead enforcement and there was no more rum to be sold so that there was no prospect of the bonds appreciating in value. Under the will Mrs. Smith ... but up to date she had only received in cash $1,774, which had been paid as commissions. This was unseemly.

There had been no question of law, said Judge Clearwater, which could not have been taken charge of by a competent law clerk and in case of doubt he could have referred it to a ... lawyer for determination. This estate Mrs. Smith had helped ... cumulate, but she would be in her grave by the time the two executors were ready to close it up, if they had their way. Notwithstanding this, they were trying to strike out her objections as frivolous; their attitude was one of contemptuous insolence. The Acker, Merrall & Condit bonds were now worth fifty cents on the dollar; indications were that as a result of the eighteenth amendment they would not worth that when they became due. Already the company had closed its big Forty-second street store because it was unable to procure liquor. Today the real estate had a market, but if its sale was deferred indefinitely there might be an entirely different condition of affairs.

Referring to the bill of Mr. Beckett Judge Clearwater said that Mr. Harwood in a letter had expressed doubt about paying it because it might not meet with the approval of the legatees. He and Mr. Burkan and Mrs. Smith were entirely willing to have Surrogate Gill pass on the bill.

If the estate could be closed now, he was willing to say quits and let by-gones be by-gones, and Mrs. Smith would be enabled to enjoy what can be saved from the wreck of what should have been a magnificent estate. There was not the slightest chance of there being any residue, and unless the assets were realized on now, they would all be dissipated and disappear.

On behalf of Messrs. Bruce and Harwood, Mr. Ballantine said all the excitement was caused by Judge Clearwater misunderstanding and misquoting what had been said. Both Mr. Bruce and Mr. Harwood would like to be relieved of the burden of this estate, and everybody was now asking for the instruction of the court. They never imagined they were trustees. They had made their accounts, in which Mrs. Smith had joined, and she had had the benefit of separate counsel. Mr. Bruce and Mr. Harwood were not saying the estate should be continued. They merely had obeyed the directions of the court which were given when they made their accounting in 1917.

At this point Judge Bruce asked leave to speak, and said he was unprepared for the atmosphere prevailing. He had come to court happy because for the first time he felt the estate was out of the woods. If the estate had been sold immediately after Mr. Smith died, there would not have been enough to pay debts. When he died, Mr. Smith owed $42,000 in floating indebtedness, consisting of small bills, and also a large aggregate indebtedness to banks and trust companies for loans, all of which were then overdue. Most of the assets were absolutely unliquid. The will, said Judge Bruce, was admitted to probate in January, 1914. In August of that year the world war broke out, with the consequent depression of values, particularly of securities, and the executors were able to hold off the creditors until they could get their breath. But now they had succeeded in paying all debts. Never had he had any estate in his office which gave so much worry and agony as this, for all of which his only compensation had been his executor's commissions, covering seven years.

If ever there was an estate which needed experienced advice of some one who had the confidence of presidents of banks and trust companies, it was this estate. The executors scratched gravel to get enough money to pay interest on time, and had been able to carry overdue paper for a period of six years. How many Ulster county banks would have done it? At every monthly directors' meeting an explanation had to be made, as well as to every bank examiner, but it had been done only because the adviser of the executors was a man in whom the big banks had confidence.

When the war came on, said Judge Bruce, what could the executors do with such stock as that of the Bayside Realty Company? Yet the executors crept on, and instead of being a wreck, the estate had been brought safely into court and nobody could look the executors of George J. Smith's estate in the eyes and say that Mr. Smith or his estate owed them one penny.

There was a demand in New York and its environs for improved property, but not for vacant property such as that in which the Smith estate had been interested. One property had been sold for $75,000; the executors had been paid $5,000 but the purchaser refused to complete negotiations and had forfeited the $5,000.

The court could not confer a greater favor on the executors, said Judge Bruce, than by ordering a sale of assets and letting them go out of court. Under these circumstances, it was a little hard to come in court and be greeted with innuendoes about "the past won't be raked up." Personally, he was a "Catskill mountain lawyer." He had begun in justice's court and while he did not know whether he ever had learned much more law than he knew when practicing there, he did know that he was not a trustee under this will and he knew an executor's duty was to pay debts and then come in court. If the executors had put up the assets for sale in the Vesey street auction rooms, it would be the creditors and not the legatees who would be coming in court. After creeping along from year to year, it was a relief to be able to come in court now and not very pleasant to hear the things which had been said.

Judge Bruce said he intended to fulfill his trust because he had promised George J. Smith he would act as an executor. He had served for seven years and received in fees $2,... A Catskill mountain lawyer was worth more than that. Judge Clearwater would get that for appearing in court seven days. Mr. Harwood had served as an executor because he was a friend of Mr. Smith. They had worked hard together and after riding right through the storm they came to land with hands blistered only to hear harsh words.

Judge Clearwater in reply said he had made no imputation on the executor's integrity but his remarks were that they were not well advised in many respects. He would accept the statement of the eminence and ability of the executors' attorney, and even accepting their statement of their trials and tribulations, he would continue to ask: Ought not this estate to be closed?

"It is not for me to determine," replied Judge Bruce, "the ... that question, turn to His Honor; he will determine that, and the manner of closing it. Personally, I would like to be relieved."

"It is not for me to say, either," said Judge Clearwater, "but as an experienced and prudent judge, undoubtedly His Honor will take in consideration the wishes of all parties to the end that Mrs. Smith can enjoy the estate her husband intended for her."

Judge Clearwater's suggestion that legacies could be paid in bonds of the Acker, Merrall & Condit Company was met by the question raised by Mr. McGovern what proof there was that the bonds would not be worth par at their maturity in 1923. Previously he filed objections to the sale of the bonds before maturity. If the estate were closed, bonds should be distributed in kind so that legatees could liquidate them.

Arthur C. Connelly said one point had been overlooked, that at all previous hearings all parties had joined in requesting the executors to continue, and there had been no intimation that the bonds would not be worth full value in 1923. Now, after their magnificent management, when they came in court with all debts paid and a bank balance of $50,000, the attitude was changed. Mrs. Hardenburgh would accept bonds if others did, provided they were appraised at full value.

The bonds, said Judge Bruce, were the only revenue-producing asset of the estate, and if the personal estate were distributed there must be some provision for paying taxes and interest. He never yet had refused to accept an offer for the assets which any man in good conscience could accept, and he knew of no avenue the executors had neglected in searching for purchasers. Had it not been for the serious housing situation Brooklyn, the improved real estate could not have been sold advantageously as it had been. The stock in the various land improvement companies had been bought twelve years ago, but everybody knew the boom had burst in regard to unimproved real estate. Mr. Smith owned all the stock of the Dyker Park Improvement Company. That property was mortgaged for $30,000, which was the only direct obligation of the estate. The total income of the estate was $10,140, and the net income about $6,300. The amount on hand was $54,000. Outside the two lawyers' bills, the only expenses were executors' commissions and expenses of accounting.

One of the attorneys stated he had learned that the Acker, Merrall & Condit bonds would not be paid at maturity but preferred stock would be issued for them.

During the discussion, Mr. Harwood explained his own position. He had declined Mr. Smith's proposal to act as executor, but after his death found he had been so named, and as a friend because of the complicated condition of affairs he had determined to act as a matter of duty. Mr. Beckett had thought the estate insolvent and always advised the executors to proceed cautiously and upon that theory. Personally he had believed the estate solvent but never was in a position to close up matters until debts were paid. As soon as this had been done, he had advised that all legatees get together and agree either as to a division or future management. He did not want delay and was willing to help the others close matters.

Mr. Stewart, who for a year was secretary to Mr. Smith, was examined in detail in regard to the stock of the various realty corporations held by Mr. Smith. There was no demand for this stock, he said, and efforts to sell it had been without result. Some of the companies were out of business and in other companies he thought in time the stock would have good value. Bayside-Flushing Company stock should sell at par as it had a book value of $150. The Long Island Estates owned an unimproved farm. Within two years, he thought, there would be a decided advance in the value of the Smith real estate holdings; this was not a hope based only on imagination but was a reasonable expectation.

Elmer E. Storey, president of the Bayside National Bank, gave similar testimony in regard to the Bayside Flushing Company. There was no demand now for unimproved real estate of that character in that vicinity. His bank was interested in the estate to the extent of a $2,000 loan to E. Scott McKnight, for which he had assigned his $10,000 legacy as collateral.

At the close of the examination, it was agreed that the attorneys for the legatees shall meet in New York city next Monday afternoon to try to agree on a plan of distribution, and the matter was adjourned until December 6 and 7, when the claim of the estate of Mr. Beckett will be taken up.

Humorous Description of How Phrase "Wise Men of Gotham" Had Its Origin.

The phrase, "wise men of Gotham," came into being in a most peculiar manner. Gotham was a small town in Nottingham, far from the usual commerce of old England's highways. King John, at the head of a goodly company, decided one day to sojourney that he would pass through the town. In those days the passage of a royal retinue through a village meant numerous hardships for the citizens. The king's guards demanded food for man and beast, and generally forgot to pay for it. In addition, horseshoers, carpenters and other tradesmen were called upon to do various work without any return. The citizens therefore devised a scheme to turn their king from his path.

When his majesty came within a mile or so of the hamlet he met various citizens engaged in the most outlandish pursuits. One was attempting to drown an eel, another attempting to drag the reflection of an early evening moon from a pond with the aid of a rope, another was building a fence around a cuckoo that had lit on a bush, and a fourth was attempting to sharpen a sword on a bit of cheese.

The king decided at once that the village was a gathering place of madmen, and ordered the route changed, and his troops and gentlemen passed around the supposed haunt of lunatics. From this came the local proverb: "More fools pass through Gotham than remain in it."

FOOD AT 18 CENTS A DAY

Laborer's Allowance Was Indeed a Mere Pittance During the Seventeenth Century.

In the early part of the seventeenth century the maximum wages a carpenter, stone mason or plasterer was allowed to demand was $60 a year. Blacksmiths and shoemakers were permitted to earn up to $50 a year. Tailors were limited to $40 a year. If they worked by the day and supplied their own meat and drink, stone masons and carpenters were allowed to demand as much as 54 cents a day; if the master supplied the meat and drink, the maximum daily wage was only 36 cents.

Women servants were graded in three classes, the maximum wages being $20, $15 and $10 a year, respectively, for the first, second and third classes. These yearly rates, of course, were in addition to food and drink. A woman worker in the fields was permitted to demand up to 12 cents a day and food and drink, or 24 cents a day if she provided her own nourishment.

From these figures it would seem as if 18 cents for men and 12 cents for women was deemed sufficient to cover the daily cost of food and drink. Even after allowing for the difference in money's purchasing power then and now, it is obvious that the laborer of that epoch was willing to live on much less than is his descendant of today.—Lee Meriwether in the Missouri Historical Review.

In Addressing the Stranger.

Every locality in America has more or less definitely defined nicknames the residents call strangers when addressing them. In Philadelphia, for instance, strangers are addressed as "Mack." A Philadelphian wishing to ask the time from some one he didn't know would say: "What time is it, Mack?"

Out in Seattle the common name for a stranger is "Bo." This is probably due to the influence of the I. W. W. Lumber jacks, mine workers and "blanket stiffs" all go by the familiar name of "Bo." The extensive use of this term has gradually been adopted by the more polite strata of society in that section, and is now considered good form.

In Denver they have the breezy western "Bill." In Chicago it is "Jack;" in the army "Buddy." In Louisville it is "Colonel," of course. In Boston it is "Neighbor," while in New York one Broadwayite names it is "Boy."

WORSE THAN ANCIENT FORMS

Oldtime Ordeal by Fire and Water Declared Eclipsed by That of Modern Travel.

Those who opine that the widely advertised ordeals and trials of the olden days were the only simon-pure specimens have another opine coming to them. Their opiners, I may say, are badly out of kilter, writes Kenneth L. Roberts in the Saturday Evening Post. There was a time when I could shudder as with the palsy at some of the trials upon which mankind deliberately embarked before the old world had become as shopworn as it now is; but now that I have looked more deeply into the matter I can't get a shudder out of any of them.

They weren't genuine, blown-in-the-glass articles at all. Anybody could beat the game. There was always a little shop up an alley where for a certain consideration one could buy fireproofing material guaranteed to carry him safely through trial by fire, or an imitation stomach which could be lowered cunningly down the throat so that trial by poison could be safely negotiated, or asbestos paint of such potency that after three coats had been applied to the soles of the feet the owner of the feet could not only skip lightly across nine red-hot plowshares, but could even do a marathon on them if the occasion demanded it.

No; the gentlemen back in the dark ages who went through fire and water in order to demonstrate their worthiness to tall willowy blonds who lived in unheated stone castles and were therefore subject to inflammatory rheumatism were not so hardy and reckless as some people suppose. And there is a present-day trial which makes those cleverly press agented trials of the moldy past look rickety and undernourished and nauseated. I refer to that celebrated European ordeal known as trial by travel.

FORCED TO RENEW LEARNING

Mrs. Minerva Jones and Her Unfortunate Instructor Both Played in Hard Luck.

In attending the Americanization class Mrs. Minerva Jones had one object, and one only. She wanted to learn to write her name. For a time all effort seemed futile, and the painstaking and conscientious teacher was on the verge of despair; but at last patience had its reward, and toward the end of the course Minerva was able to trace laboriously but proudly the magic symbols. Then she rested on her laurels. The exhausted teacher heaved a sigh of relief as the door closed on Minerva's portly form.

"I feel that I have not acted in vain, but I should hate to go through that again," she said to one of the assistants.

At the beginning of the next term, much to the astonishment of all, Minerva again presented herself, bland and smiling as usual.

"Well, Minerva, what can we do for you?"

The instructor endeavored to speak cheerfully.

"I've done come to learn to write my name, Miss Mary," announced Minerva complacently.

"But you learned how to do that last term, Minerva. You surely haven't forgotten so soon."

Minerva smiled broadly. "No, I ain't forgot, Miss Mary, but I've done changed my name since then. I'm Mrs. Ephraim Jackson now."—Youth's Companion.

When Laundry Traveled Far.

No present-day washing bills reach the figures attained by such documents in the days when people went far afield to ensure good laundry work. French exquisites of the court of Henry III had their washing done in Holland, where the soft water of the dykes was supposed to impart a special gloss to linen.

Apparently this practice lasted until the close of the eighteenth century, for Sebastien Mercier, in his "Tableau de Paris," published shortly before the French revolution, protests against the patronage by rich people of the Dutch, to the exclusion of native laundresses. Still more remarkable is the fact, mentioned in the "Memoirs de Comte de Vaublanc," that wealthy merchants in Bordeaux used to send their linen all the way to San Domingo to be washed.

FOLLOW MICHAELS, STERN CO.'S LEAD

Other Large Rochester Makers Announce Reduction of 33 1-3 Percent On Suitings—Overcoats Still High Because of Agreement.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Rochester, N. Y., Nov. 16.—Following the lead of Michaels, Stern and Company, all the other large clothing manufacturing concerns in this city today announced a reduction of 33 1-3 percent in the wholesale prices of suitings. The reduction made by Michaels, Stern and Company affected both overcoats and suits, but the other Rochester manufacturers, being members of the National Manufacturers Association and National Association of Retailers, were bound, it is said, by an agreement reached at Atlantic City several months ago, not to reduce the price of suits before November 15, nor the price of overcoats before December 1. While admitting such an agreement exists, they deny that they were guilty of any federal law violation.

HOW—

CHINESE SCHOLARS ARE TRAINED TO MEMORIZE.—Chinese schoolroom methods are interesting as showing the contrast between schools in the Orient and schools in this country. Many elderly people will recall the time when practices in the district schools of the United States had some of the Chinese thoroughness and dependence upon the memory, remarks the New York Sun and Herald.

The beginner takes his book to the teacher, who hears him read a column or more, after which the pupil returns to his desk and repeats this lesson aloud until he can recite it from memory. He then takes his book again to the teacher, turns his back upon his master and recites what he has learned. This is called "backing the lesson."

In this way the pupil commits the whole book to memory and he is expected to learn it so thoroughly that he can at any moment repeat the whole of any passage the initial words of which are mentioned to him.

Just before the noonday recess the teacher writes a sentiment, a proverb or a proposition upon a slip of red paper and pastes it upon the door. Each boy as he goes out reads the lines and in the afternoon renders to the teacher another line which will, with the first, make a couplet.

In China all honors, social, pecuniary and official, await the scholar, and the teacher has always at hand illustrious examples to hold up for the emulation of those who become discouraged. Among the ancients, as among the moderns, many who were poor or stupid rose to eminence by sheer diligence and self-discipline.

The teacher tells of So Chin, who, being afflicted with drowsiness when at his nightly studies, thrust a needle through his flesh so that pain might keep him awake; and of the restless Sai Lin, whose active body revolted against sitting at his books, and who cured himself of a constant disposition to rise and leave them by placing a pail of cold water where his feet would be immersed in it whenever he stood up.

HUMBLE CATFISH DOES WORK

How One Oregon Town Gets Its Sewers Cleaned at Small Expense to the Taxpayers.

In one of the towns of Oregon the familiar catfish figures as a hardy pioneer, and a valued adjunct to the street department, all because the terra cotta sewers and drains, especially those in the lower part of the town, frequently get choked.

If the sewer is not broken it can be cleaned by passing a rope through it, to be pulled backward and forward until the obstruction is loosened and removed. The deputy superintendent of streets had a good deal of such work to look after, but at last he discovered a quick, sure and easy method.

He goes to the river, catches a catfish, ties a string to its tail, drops it down a manhole into the sewer, and it at once starts for the river and forces its way through any obstruction not as solid as brick, dragging the string after it. Then the deputy goes as far down the sewer as he deems necessary and picks up the string, which he uses to draw a wire through the sewer, and with this a rope is pulled through and the sewer is soon cleaned.

How Gipsies Dodge Tax.

Gipsies in a picturesque encampment near Guildford, Surrey, have discovered a novel method of evading local taxation. As their encampment is permanent they become liable to house duty, for a caravan is held to be a permanent residence if stationary in one spot. There is a regulation, however, that if the wheels of a permanent caravan home are turned completely round once every year the owner is absolved from duty. Consequently, when the rate collector calls at the camp there is a general wheel-turning. Every caravan simultaneously moves forward about two yards—and the gipsies can live duty free for another year.—London Daily Mail.

How Paper Yarn Is Waterproofed.

Yarns of paper came into prominence during the war, but this material has made a place for itself and a great deal of it still is in use for certain purposes. The durability and desirability of this material has been greatly increased by the process of making it waterproof, which has been used, but the best method seems to be first to pass the yarn through a bath of gum, tannin, and silicate of soda at 70 degrees C. and then through a cold bath of basic formate of aluminum. Fabrics of paper yarns in this country have so far been used principally for packing purposes and certain types of bags, notably those used for onions.

Why Boat Pans Are Gold.

Pans are made of gold for the reason that this is the only material which is available that will withstand the corroding action of silk.

Ancient Perfume.

It seems strange in an age like today to read of millions as a perfume; one of the romances about it lies in the story by Hakluyt of a pilgrim wounding, at the risk of his life, from the Levant, a beast of saffron in a hollow made in his staff.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

TO THE PEOPLE OF KINGSTON:-

Your attention is called to the following provision of the law, which is now being enforced by the State Department of Agriculture:

"No person shall without the consent of the owner, use any milk bottle belonging to any dealer of milk, having the name or initials of the dealer stamped as marked thereon. Nor shall any person without the consent of the owner place in any such jar or bottle any substitute or product other than milk."

"Every person violating the provisions of this law shall forfeit to the people of the State not less than fifty dollars for the first violation and not less than one hundred dollars nor more than two hundred dollars for the second and each subsequent violation."

It will be seen from the above that people using milk bottles for any purpose other than enumerated above, violates the law. Because of the scarcity of bottles and the difficulty in obtaining them from manufacturers, the milk dealers of Kingston are greatly hampered in the delivery of milk. Agents of the Agriculture Department are expected to soon visit the city to look up violations of the law; therefore everybody having milk bottles in their possession is urged to set them out in order that they may be picked up by the milk wagons.

The Good of Life.

What is the good of life? A philosopher has answered: "Giving and loving and helping." The happy are the helping, the loving are the living. "He who has a tear for pity and a hand open as day for melting charity;" he whose good deeds are without ostentation or expectation of gratitude—he, in the truest history of God, Charles Lamb tells us that the keenest pleasure he ever knew was to do a good action by stealth and have it found out by accident.—Humphrey J. Desmond.

William Jason Knew.

William Jason Tucker, four-year-old son of Dr. and Mrs. E. T. Tucker of Columbus, was out riding with his parents and sister Sunday night, and an unusually large number of fire flies were seen along the country roads. His sister, age six, asked what caused the light in the flies. While her mother was trying to explain, William Jason remarked scornfully: "Why, Daily Margaret, anybody ought to know that. It's because they have headlights to their automobiles."—Indianapolis News.

POUGHKEEPSIE 303-305 WALL STREET, KINGSTON SYRACUSE

SARATOGA VS. K. H. S. SATURDAY

Kingston High School is still on the map as far as football is concerned. Two weeks ago the local boys went up to Glens Falls, where they defeated the high school team of that city, to the tune of 6-0.

The Glens Falls team is a much heavier team than the Maroon and White outfit, outweighing the local boys 32 pounds to the man. The Kingstonians average one hundred and fifty pounds.

A week ago Saturday, the Saratoga Springs team defeated the Glens Falls team with the same score that the Kingston team did. Since there was an open date for Saturday, owing to the withdrawal of the Hudson team from the Interscholastic League, Manager DeWitt immediately booked the Saratoga Springs eleven for a game to be played on the Athletic Field, Saturday afternoon at 2:15 o'clock.

Of course, the booking of this team means that the local Athletic Association will have to furnish a big guarantee to the Saratoga Springs team. The guarantee will exceed $175 and the boys hope to raise the money outside of the school.

The Glens Falls team raised the $150 guarantee for the Kingston team without the financial aid of the school's students. Business men and citizens did their bit toward helping the team. Glens Falls is much smaller than Kingston, so the Maroon and White ought to receive better support than the Glens Falls team did.

The tickets for the game are being sold by the members of the football team, so if you are approached and asked to buy a ticket, don't be afraid to dig deep, because everyone's cooperation will be appreciated by the boys.

A FAST STONE RIDGE HORSE

Percy Brink's midget race horse Siliqua (2:15½) is at the home stable at Stone Ridge after a most successful season. Out of 16 starts he has come in first nine times, been second five times and twice unplaced. The little trotter has beaten horses that have sold for $4,000 and $5,000 this year—such as Bob the Great (2:09¼) that F. D. Wilcox of Deposit paid $4,500 for, Robert Ornoux (2:13) owned by Mr. Sanford of the Oneonta Hotel, who refused $5,000 for his horse at Hartford a week ago. Siliqua is said to be unhurt after his seven years racing and, according to his owner has won 19 races in the last two years, been 13 times second, once third and twice out of the money, winning $7,500 for his owner, who is but 21 years old, one of the youngest men driving harness horses. Brink has also raced Winsome Worthy this year, winning 4 firsts and several seconds and thirds. He was once out of the money.

Sweets Losing Popularity in France.

France has lost its sweet tooth. Recent official statistics show that, because sugar was unobtainable during the war, children born between 1914 and 1919 have been educated by their parents not to require sugar in their drinks and food.

As a result the consumption of sugar in France has fallen to one-eighth the pre-war mark.

France has become such an unprofitable market for the chocolates that nearly all the big manufacturers are sending nine-tenths of their output to the United States and South America.

She Never Rides.

A Los Angeles man has been granted a divorce because his wife forced him to do the family wash. If women ever asked divorce on such grounds the courts would all have to operate night shifts.
